Meeting programs feature demonstrations by members, and manufacturers of hardware and software. Special offers from vendors are often announced. Time is allocated at each meeting for attendees to ask questions and describe problems they are experiencing with their system's hardware or software. These are discussed and resolved by others present who may have had similar difficulties, or the necessary experience to help with answers to particular problems.

NCTCUG JOURNAL - Published 8 times each year, each issue includes articles by our members and reports on club activities. The Journal reprints articles from similar publications from across the country and around the world, covering a broad range of personal computing interests.
